MISCELLANEOUS READING. THE WAY TO EMINENCE.

Long ago a little boy was entered at Harrow school. He was put into a class beyond his years, and where all the scholars had the advantage of previous instruction denied to him. His master chid him for his dullness, and all his efforts then could not raise him from the lowest place on the ferm .-But, nothing daunted, he procured the grammars and other elementary books which his class fellows had gone through in previous terms. He devoted the bours of play, and not a few of the hours of sleep, to the mastering of these; till, in a few weeks, he gradualbegan to rise, and it was not long till he shot far ahead of all his companions, and became not only the leader of the division, but the pride of Harrow. You may see the statue of that boy, whose career began with this fit of energetic application, in St. Paul's greatest Oriental scholar of modern Europe-

At the Convention in Rutland, last week, after an afternoon spent in denouncing the Bible, the marriage institution, &c., and in laudation of "spiritualism," vegetarianism," and "free love," Elder Grant, the Millerite, got up and repeated 1st Timothy, iv. 1, 3, Now the spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, forbidding to marry, commanding to abstain from meats," &c. Whether because this apt passage proved unpalatable, or for some other reason, the Convention incontinently adjourned.

CAIRO AFTER THE FLOOD.

A correspondent, writing from Cairo, says: The citizens of Cairo are busily engaged in removing the slimy deposit from their houses. There are four hundred and fity-one distinct and distinguishable sinks in the town, and several wards yet to hear from. "The offence (iveness) of Cairo is rank and smells to heaven." Myriads of musquitues, of the largest known breed, and ravenous beyond precedent, fill the air, and are ready to commence their bloody work.

ONE OF JERROLD'S BEST. At a social club, to which Jerrold belonged the subject turned one evening upon music. The discussion was animated, and a certain song was cited as an exquisite composition. "That song," exclaimed an enthusiastic hand, a full supply of Blackberry Cordial, member, "always carries me away when I hear it!" Jerroid—looking eagerly round the tuble-"Can anybody whistle it?"
